

Answers to Why a sustainable future means shopping like our grandparents it's time to revisit	We must look again at doing this have been popping up	Have been appearing over the last a three month pop-up	A temporary store/shop that will be there for 3 months DIY classes	instruction on do-it-yourself we lug home	carry (heavy loads) to our house clogging up	blocking or holding up progress it's projected that	people say that this will happen a carrier bag	a shopping bag, usually made from plastic or paper the odd carrot	just one or two carrots staggering	amazing, astonishing that ends up in the bin	that is thrown away cardboard boxes of salad to measure out	cardboard boxes which fix the quantities on sale delis	short for delicatessen we can do away with	we can get rid of; we can reject from down the road	locally sourced They worked together to create a demographic and a demand for their product	Their team worked to make a section of the population wish for or need what they made. a zero waste aisle	a corridor in the supermarket with food that does not cause any waste at all cookie cutter town centres	town centres that look exactly the same as many others. [a cookie cutter is a device used to cut pastry into the shapes for cookies (or biscuits)] thrives on celebrating what's local	succeeds very well on promoting local produce and services raising our local brewed ale to the past	toasting what has happened ["to raise a glass" = to toast; to drink to something]