

FOOD FOR THE FUTURE

Which two countries do you think are the biggest consumers of meat in the world?

China

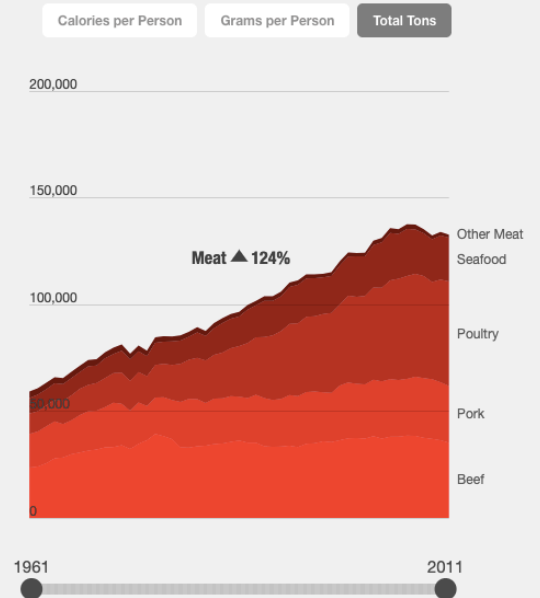

China's meat consumption has skyrocketed in the last few decades, both nationally and per capita. With a meat diet made up most predominantly of pork, the average person in China consumed almost 20 times more grams of pork per day in 2011 than in 1961.

About

United States

Second to China, the U.S. consumes more meat than any other country. Poultry has been the fastest growing meat of choice in the last 50 years, as consumption has increased by more than 400% while beef has grown only by 50%.
